Since her parents' death in a terrorist bombing five years earlier, Chloe Gardiner has been the guardian of her twin 15-year-old half-brothers, Julian and Sebastian, as well as 11-year-old Katie. Sebastian falls in with the wrong crowd, and gets arrested. Divorced father Alex Bergman is ready to kill the kids who violently vandalized his house, especially because his six-year-old daughter, Steffie, was there at the time. After meeting Chloe, Alex agrees to let Sebastian work off the damage. As the days pass, Alex and Sebastian bond. Seeing the sort of woman Chloe is, Alex begins to be interested in her—and the feeling is mutual. However, there's always a snake in paradise, and this time, it's Steffie, a spoiled little brat who's determined to keep her dad to herself. Rose has painted a picture of two segmented families who would make one great, complete family, if only they could make it happen. Readers who enjoy books full of honest emotions will go for this one. --Shelley Mosley

The characters were likable and very real with all the failings and strengths of normal people. There were some interesting plot twists to keep things interesting. I recommend this one for those looking for a quick and entertaining read. --Maura Frankman, Coffee Time Romance & More
