Bittersweet (Faerie Song Trilogy) By Michele Barrow-Belisle

To save the Faery world and her mother's life, seventeen year old Lorelei sacrificed everything, and the dangerous bargains she made in Nevermore had lasting repercussions. Now safely back in her own world, Lorelei seems the same to her high school friends and her supernatural boyfriend in spite of the dark magic growing within her. Yet love across dimensions is complicated, especially when an invisible veil between the two worlds is sealing, threatening to separate Lorelei and Adrius forever. Determined to find a solution, Lorelei resorts to exploring her new found powers. But when her friends fall ill, Lorelei can't help but wonder if her she's responsible. The nightmares from Nevermore tighten their icy hold when someone arrives determined to destroy Lorelei's world, starting with those closest to her. Once again she's forced to choose between her family and friends... and a love that was ill-fated from the start.

Editorial Review

About the Author

A dreamer at heart, Michele Barrow-Belisle has always lived with one foot in this reality and one foot in another, one of her own imagining. So it follows that she would grow up to write about and sculpt the characters from those enchanting worlds she knows and loves so well. A fan of everything romantic, her young adult novels are populated with scintillating witches, vamps and fey. Michele resides in southern Canada with her hubby and son who indulge her growing obsession with reading, writing and most importantly... chocolate.
