Organizations, companies, and industries are faced with new demands and pressures resulting from the dynamics and nature of the modern marketplace and from the development and introduction of new technologies. This calls for a different kind of safety thinking, a thinking that sees people as the source of diversity, insight, creativity, and wisdom about safety, not as the source of risk that undermines an otherwise safe system. It also calls for a kind of thinking that is quicker to trust people and mistrust bureaucracy, and that is more committed to actually preventing harm than to looking good. Safety Differently: Human Factors for a New Era takes a forward-looking, and assertive and progressive view that prepares you to resolve current safety issues in any field. In addition to new material covering changes in the field during the past decade, the author of Safety Differently takes a new approach to discussing safety. The previous edition looked critically at the answers human factors would typically provide and compared/contrasted them with current research and insights at that time. The second edition explains how to turn safety from a bureaucratic accountability back into an ethical responsibility for those who do our dangerous work, and how to embrace the human factor not as a problem to control, but as a solution to harness. The second edition includes: Latest human factors/ergonomics research applicable to safety Examples and cases on human factors Accountability and just culture Learning objectives, key points, and study questions within each chapter Bulleted lists and illustrations where possible
