Editorial Review

From School Library Journal

Gr 5–9—In the third and final installment of the "WondLa" trilogy (after A Hero for WondLa), Eva Nine is still struggling to stop the war that could destroy Orbona. The battle between the humans and aliens has forced Eva to abandon her friends and go into hiding for fear of leading Loroc, the evil sibling-eating alien, to those she loves. But when Cadmus Pryde, the leader of the humans, attacks the city of Solas, Eva's courage is tested and the fate of Orbana hangs in the balance. Teri Hatcher skillfully crafts a strong vocal presence for Eva and gives life to Eva's friends and foes. Though the narration speed seems slow at times, the pacing helps establish the detailed and multi-dimensional world. The audiobook can certainly stand alone as a lovely example of oral storytelling, but it is regrettable that listeners miss DiTerlizzi's beautiful illustrations. Those who are interested, however, can find the original pictures, several drawings, character bios, and some really cool augmented reality games on WondLa.com. Recommended for fans of the series, Dungeons and Dragons enthusiasts, and epic-friendship fantasy lovers.—Chani Craig, Converse Middle School, Palmer, MA

In this conclusion to DiTerlizzi's much-loved series, Eva Nine is on the run, branded a traitor and a spy. The humans and aliens who both populate the magnificently lush planet, home to upside-down birds and immense water bears, are now at odds, and Eva is the only one with the skills to reason with each species. Like Middle Earth and Oz, Orbona is packed with creatures and places with proper names in unfamiliar languages, and although there are a few stabs at exposition, readers will more fully appreciate the epic sweep of this complicated story if they read the books in order. Of particular interest is Eva's development into a young woman of unwavering compassion and courage, even in the face of betrayal, loss, and injury. DiTerlizzi's beautiful illustrations are worth the price of admission, as usual, and they do much to help the reader distinguish among the plethora of strange creatures. WondLa fans will be sad to see it all end, and, even with some uneven pacing, they'll be satisfied with the result. Grades 5-8. --Paula Willey
