Editorial Review

From School Library Journal

Gr 8 Up-When she wakes up amidst tubes and lines in a hospital room, Evening (Eve) realizes that the last thing she can remember seconds before the horrible crash was that she was looking at an exceptionally crimson apple that stood out in a vendor's shop among an array of average looking fruit. Eve survives her debilitating injuries, but before she can fully regain consciousness, her mother arranges to have her transported to her own research facility-Spiker Biopharmaceuticals. While Eve is recuperating, she meets a mysterious boy about her own age and tries to learn who he really is and what his job is at her mother's facility. At the same time, she's also trying to cope with her mother's demands that keep her in isolation. Eve is desperate to maintain communication with her best friend Aislin, and her mother eventually relents-but only if Eve agrees to work on a genetic project. Listeners will enjoy the present-day sci-fi plot (Feiwel & Friends, 2012) because of its fast pace and twists and the intrigue of Eve's creation of the "perfect" human, who she names Adam. Revelations occur quickly, making this a great book for reluctant readers. Narrators Jenna Lamia (Eve) and Holter Graham (Solo) read alternating chapters, bringing these fascinating characters to life and creating a promising love interest. A not-to-be-missed, edgy sci-fi story.-Sheila Acosta, Cody Library, San Antonio, TX ©(c) Copyright 2011. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc. From Booklist

Evening, the daughter of a powerful genetic-engineering visionary, is whisked from the hospital hours after surgeons reattach her leg following a traffic accident. While recovering at her mother's research facility, Spiker Biopharmaceuticals, Eve meets Solo, the orphaned son of Spiker's partners, who is collecting damaging information that could take down the whole corporation. Meanwhile, Eve is making some discoveries of her own. First, her leg is flawless mere days after being severed. Then there's her creation of Adam, a computer that simulates a man from the DNA up. Questions build into a late-night chase around Seattle, a clever rescue of Eve's troubled friend, and a dramatic and dangerous climax. Solo and Eve, who swap narration duties, have clearly differentiated voices, and when Adam appears in the flesh, he does as well. Too many logical leaps and unanswered questions about the Spiker program could be problematic for dedicated sf fans, but the blend of action and suspense will be welcoming for plenty of others. HIGH-DEMAND NOTE: Grant is behind the best-selling Gone series, and the husband-wife team cowrote the popular Animorphs series. That kind of pedigree moves books. Grades 7-10. --Heather Booth
