

Arrows

By Melissa Gorzelanczyk

Download now

Read Online

Arrows By Melissa Gorzelanczyk

A modern cupid story set in present-day Wisconsin combining the fantastical elements of Greek mythology with the contemporary drama of MTV's Teen Mom.

People don't understand love. If they did, they'd get why dance prodigy Karma Clark just can't say goodbye to her boyfriend, Danny. No matter what he says or does or how he hurts her, she can't stay angry with him . . . and can't stop loving him. But there's a reason why Karma is helpless to break things off: she's been shot with a love arrow.

Aaryn, son of Cupid, was supposed to shoot both Karma and Danny but found out too late that the other arrow in his pack was useless. And with that, Karma's life changed forever. One pregnancy confirmed. One ballet scholarship lost. And dream after dream tossed to the wind.

A clueless Karma doesn't know that her toxic relationship is Aaryn's fault . . . but he's going to get a chance to make things right. He's here to convince Danny to man up and be there for Karma. But what if this god from Mount Olympus finds himself falling in love with a beautiful dancer from Wisconsin who can never love him in return?

This fast-paced debut novel explores the internal & external conflicts of a girl who finds herself inexplicably drawn to a boy who seemingly doesn't reciprocate her feelings, touching on the issues of love, sex and responsibility, with a heroine struggling to control her destiny--perfect for fans of Katie McGarry's novels and MTV's 16 and Pregnant.

From the Hardcover edition.

 Download Arrows ...pdf

 Read Online Arrows ...pdf

Arrows

By Melissa Gorzelanczyk

Arrows By Melissa Gorzelanczyk

A modern cupid story set in present-day Wisconsin combining the fantastical elements of Greek mythology with the contemporary drama of MTV's Teen Mom.

People don't understand love. If they did, they'd get why dance prodigy Karma Clark just can't say goodbye to her boyfriend, Danny. No matter what he says or does or how he hurts her, she can't stay angry with him . . . and can't stop loving him. But there's a reason why Karma is helpless to break things off: she's been shot with a love arrow.

Aaryn, son of Cupid, was supposed to shoot both Karma and Danny but found out too late that the other arrow in his pack was useless. And with that, Karma's life changed forever. One pregnancy confirmed. One ballet scholarship lost. And dream after dream tossed to the wind.

A clueless Karma doesn't know that her toxic relationship is Aaryn's fault . . . but he's going to get a chance to make things right. He's here to convince Danny to man up and be there for Karma. But what if this god from Mount Olympus finds himself falling in love with a beautiful dancer from Wisconsin who can never love him in return?

This fast-paced debut novel explores the internal & external conflicts of a girl who finds herself inexplicably drawn to a boy who seemingly doesn't reciprocate her feelings, touching on the issues of love, sex and responsibility, with a heroine struggling to control her destiny--perfect for fans of Katie McGarry's novels and MTV's 16 and Pregnant.

From the Hardcover edition.

Arrows By Melissa Gorzelanczyk Bibliography

- Sales Rank: #1041757 in eBooks
- Published on: 2016-01-26
- Released on: 2016-01-26
- Format: Kindle eBook

 Download Arrows ...pdf

 Read Online Arrows ...pdf

Download and Read Free Online Arrows By Melissa Gorzelanczyk

---

Editorial Review

Review

“This tale of Cupid meets teen mom is unique . . . for fans of fantasy fiction and mythology, such as Aimee Carter’s ‘The Goddess Test’ series or Rick Riordan.” —SLJ

“A sweet high-school twist on Greek mythology with added substance about teen parenting and breaking out of a bad relationship.” —Booklist

“A great mythological take on love, heartache, and teen pregnancy.” —VOYA

“Gorzelanczyk’s debut blends a light myth-meets-modern premise with weightier reflections about the struggles of a teenage parent . . . entertaining.” —Publishers Weekly

From the Hardcover edition.

About the Author

MELISSA GORZELANCZYK is a former magazine editor and columnist who loves strong coffee, live music, and arrow jewelry. A member of SCBWI, Melissa lives in Green Bay, Wisconsin, with her husband and two teenage children, one of whom is named after a Greek goddess. Visit MelissaGorzelanczyk.com and follow @MelissaGorzelanczyk on Twitter.

From the Hardcover edition.

Excerpt. © Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.

Chapter 1

Aaryn

We landed at the edge of a high school parking lot, me with two arrows in my pack. Phoebe let go of my hand to scope out the area, appearing indestructible as she lifted her bow.

“Okay, Aaryn,” she said. We’d just met five minutes earlier, though she was one of the cupids all the students had heard about. She gestured with her chin. “Them.”

Arcs of golden light swam through the arrow she nocked into her bow, and when she retracted, the fletching made a dent against her cheek. Her kohl-lined eyes focused on a couple standing by the door of the high school, dressed up for their homecoming dance. They had no idea what was coming.

The girl, a short redhead in stilettos, darted quick glances at her date, who was wiping his palms on his suit pants. Freakishly tall, that guy.

Phoebe paused. With a snap, a glittery path tore through the air. The arrow disintegrated with a burst of light through the boy’s tie. Phoebe half smiled as her arms relaxed.

“Well, Son of Eros--have you ever experienced the arrows like this?” she asked.

“No. Just target practice. Dead arrows.”

She stood beside me, and for a second I felt awesome, getting one of the prettiest goddesses as my proctor.

“How cool is it that we ended up together on finals day?” She winked. “You’re just the god I was hoping to get.”

“Oh, uh, really?”

“Mm-hmm. Tonight is definitely helping my status.”

“Glad to hear it.” I cleared my throat, anxious to get on with the test. She seemed cool, though. Maybe she’d want to get to know me once I graduated.

With a satisfied smile, Phoebe placed a second arrow against the silver wire and brought the redhead into her sights. She did this little square-up-and-hesitate thing with her shoulders. The arrow flew and disappeared. Direct hit.

Things got pretty ridiculous from there. The teens held each other for a long time, the guy bending to her height, smoothing her hair out of the way so they could have an all-out tongue war. And then the reality of it all struck me.

Love was beginning to unfold out there, actual love. No one else in the world would matter as much to them as they did to each other. Two humans who hadn't even reached adulthood, who'd barely started to learn about life, and they'd already found their soul mates. In Lakefield, Wisconsin, of all places.

I scanned the parking lot, which was as dead as the nearby farm field. "Who am I supposed to shoot?"

"Well." Phoebe smiled. "I was thinking I should help you find the perfect couple. That's not my job, just so you know--but I'd love to do a little favor for you. Eros would appreciate that, I'm sure."

"I'm going to check out the school."

"You can't open the doors."

"No one's around," I said.

"Aaryn. Wait. You know the code."

I rocked on my heels, annoyed that she was right. The code about not opening doors was one of many the gods followed. Never draw attention to yourself among humans. A door opening by itself? Humans got creeped out by stuff like that.

Then another girl's voice. I swung my quiver around on the leather strap across my chest. Two more teens were there. The girl, a brunette, threw her arms around the redhead--shocker, she'd stopped kissing the tall guy--then leapt to catch up to her date, some idiot wearing a suit coat and baseball cap. A real romantic.

I slid an arrow from my pack. It glowed brightly, a steady, vibrant orange.

“Ready to join the ranks?” Phoebe asked. Pride filled her voice. The light from my arrow cast shadows beneath her eyes.

And my targets? Too easy under that powerful parking lot light. The girl was smiling, acting like her date was the most interesting person in the world, though she seemed like the interesting one: athletic body shown off by an airy pink dress.

I snorted under my breath as the guy’s voice carried into the darkness. “You’re so sexy, Karma,” he said. Ha. What a name. Humans actually believed in stuff like karma. Mr. Romanticpulled her in, massaging her back as they kissed, his hands creeping lower and lower until they curved over her ass.

I sighed, then closed one eye. Everything around me blurred except the girl. This was it. My first match. The metal between my fingers glowing, the power to change someone’s life forever. Yes, I was the son of Eros, privileged, but like everyone else at finals, this match was the beginning of my legacy. For a second my chest felt like it was going to explode.

I let go.

The arrow melted into the girl’s back, a bull’s-eye shot. The effect was immediate. She gasped when the kiss ended and her hands slid up his neck, slow and slinky. The power of the enchantment had struck. I drew out my last arrow, which had been matched as a pair. The arrows were made that way--made for each other, just like their targets.

“What the hell--” I held the arrow up. It wasn’t glowing.

Phoebe started as I flicked my thumb on the blunt end. “Wait a minute, is that .?.?.?” She snatched the arrow and shook it, like that might help. “A practice arrow? Is this some kind of joke?”

The guy began to lead his lovesick date into the back of a pickup truck.

“There’s still time, right?” I said. “Let’s just head back for a replacement arrow. There must be some record of the pair.”

Our eyes met as we checked the Hive, our social web, accessible to us with a single thought. One thought--a power button--and we controlled a galaxy of information with ourminds. The rectangular display inside my mind lit up, ready to search.

“No way.” The arrow ration house had closed seven minutes ago.

Phoebe’s hands covered her mouth.

“How could this happen? I can’t let you go to Blackout, Aaryn, I can’t. This is--”

“Don’t get crazy. I’m not going to Blackout. Dad wouldn’t let them do that.”

“This is serious. You can’t pass finals. You really can’t pass. Leaving a human like this, only one of them shot, it’s like--the worst possible failure.” She made a wild hand motion. “This is going to ruin me.”

“Jeez, don’t panic yet.”

“I’m not panicking!”

Perfect. I twisted the end of my bow against the pavement, though I had to admit my pulse had sped up.

Blackout.

Where the failed gods go.

“How could you forget to grab a matching pair?” Her voice was getting shrill.

“Relax. This isn’t my fault.”

“You didn’t let your pack out of your sight, right?”

My bow stopped spinning. I couldn’t tell her I’d been distracted by the Hive or that I’d gone into a private comb to compare proctors with my buddy Chaz. She’d think I was a complete idiot. “I kept my pack right here the whole time,” I lied, tugging the strap.

The girl was laughing again, her head popping up for a second as Mr. Romantic shook out a quilt and handed her the corner.

“What am I going to do?” Phoebe said. “If the assembly finds out .?.?. No, they can’t, we have to lie. They can’t find out.”

They were sitting up now, facing each other, him leaning in to nuzzle her ear. Time on Earth seemed to slow. At least the guy appeared to like her.

“Do you, uh, know anyone? Who went to Blackout?” My voice was low.

“No. Of course not. Never.”

Where the failed gods go as humans, their memories wiped.

The teens were kissing again, and then they flopped out of sight. Thump. One of them bumped the truck bed.

“This is what we’re going to do.” Phoebe squeezed my arm until it stung, but I didn’t bother pulling away. “No one is going to find out about this. Got it? No one.”

“Do you think she’ll be okay?” I nodded at the truck.

“Oh, um, I don’t know, maybe--whatever! Forget about them. I’m going to say you passed. You passed, okay? If the assembly finds out about that arrow, there will be no mercy. It won’t matter whose son you are.”

I swallowed, though it felt like a knife was picking at my throat. “You’re the boss. Tonight never happened.”

Phoebe slid her hairbehind her ears and took a shaking breath. Her gauge earrings made her faceseem fierce. “This is really bad, I’ll admit it, really, really bad, but it’s going to be okay, I promise.”

“Well, hey--not everyone gets a happy ending.” My parents, for instance.

“We have to get out of here.” Phoebe grabbed my hand and yanked. Within seconds we had sliced through the atmosphere and returned to Mount Olympus, fog-breath circling our feet. There was white all around us, silver, gold, and stone. The land of the gods. We stood in the enormous corridor in silence, two cupids, though it didn’t feel awesome the way I’d expected. Phoebe’s emerald eyes were still watery, her hands trembling. She swallowed, which sounded more like a gulp.

“So, um, yeah .?.?. happy you passed?”

The question left a sour feeling in my stomach. That girl down there. Her life had changed, all right. My fist fell slack. “Yeah. Finals. Wow.”

“You’ll be a good cupid,” she added, almost like an apology for how the night had gone. “Everything will be fine, see? No one even knows we’re back. And you--are you okay?”

“I’ll be fine.”

“To think I almost lost you tonight. Oh my God, I shouldn’t even be saying that up here.”

Her anxiety was getting to me. A tight, suffocating feeling began to clench my chest. I stood tall, tried to get rid of it. I was a cupid, finally, after all those years of working my ass off. And hey--the three-year age gap between Phoebe and me had become irrelevant. Yeah, I was younger, but we were equals now. We'd botched finals together and survived. Maybe chocolate and flowers would help her feel better.

I offered her my arm, but the tight feeling stuck. "Let's see if there's a party."

Chapter 2

Karma

One year later

I sped home from school with the window all the way down. The rain was more of a drizzle and helped kill that familiar, sleep-deprived floating feeling. A sense of calmness filled me.

Fall was coming.

The trees along the road were already fading from green to golden. Summer in Lakefield had lasted too long, and it had been such a hot, hard summer. Maybe I couldn't escape what had happened in the past year, but change was in the air and it felt amazing.

At home I was greeted by the sound of Nell screaming from my mother's arms. My sweet baby's fists pummeled the air to the beat of her cry until all the weight I'd shed on the ride home pressed down on my chest, reminding me. Fall couldn't change that.

“Sorry I’m late. Mrs. Smith let me stay after for extra credit.”

“Did you know Danny bailed on babysitting again?” Leah said the second I walked in. She sat at the table, her arms crossed. “It’s one night a week. One night, which isn’t that hard, if you ask me. You should yell at him. If he was my boyfriend, I’d definitely yell at him.”

“No wonder you’re single.”

“Whatever. He’s a bad dad.”

“At least he’s in the same state as Nell.”

“Girls,” Mom said, her voice firm.

I shot my younger sister a look but kept my mouth shut for Mom’s sake. She hated when we fought about Dad. And Danny? Leah didn’t realize how busy he was. She placed our own father on a pedestal while beating Danny up over every little thing. I’m not sure if she just missed Dad, or was stupid, or what.

“Come here, baby.” I shrugged out of my backpack and brought Nell to my shoulder, relaxing at how warm and snuggly she felt. At three months old, she was average for weight but already in the top percentile for height. Maybe a future dancer. Her gasps tickled my cheek.

“I’m going to feed her,” I said.

“I just fed her fifteen minutes ago.” Mom’s lips pressed together. Was that the same flyaway ponytail she’d scraped up at five a.m.? Our days started early, thanks to my before-school dance class, but maybe she needed a break. She definitely needed a shower.

“Shhh, shhh, shhh. What’s the matter, baby? Shhh, shhh, shhh.” I flicked my gaze to the flowery clock above the fireplace. We lived in a decidedly female house full of pinks and purples and flowers and lace. That’s what happens when your dad ditches you and moves across the country. You build up a fortress of girly things so no manever hurts you again. (Mom's thinking, not mine.)

"I hate to ask, but can one of you watch her?" I did hate to ask. I hated it because they were going to think the worst of Danny, and then me, thinking I should probably just stayhome with my baby for the night. Homework? That would have to wait. I promised myself I wouldn't fall asleep until it was done.

Mom was giving me the Look.

You're the one who got yourself pregnant and I've already raised two babies of my own and I'm not impressed with your choice in men, either.

That look.

"I have plans tonight," Mom said. "If Danny had given us more notice, maybe we could have worked something out."

"Can you rock her or something?" Leah called. "I can't even think." Her homework was spread across the table, where it had probably been since three o'clock. I couldn't remember the last time I'd had the luxury of an hour to casually tinker with my homework, messaging friends the whole time and telling other people what to do. I slammed my bedroom door.

Ugh! The ripping sound as I pulled Nell's fist out of my hair, and the sting of the whole day, amplified in that moment, made my vision blur and shift. I swallowed.

Lifted my chin.

I would not cry. Not now.

I sat on my unmade bed and called Danny. Talking to him always made me feel better on days like this. Days when every-day life, silly things, really, felt overwhelming. I listened to the familiar sound of his voice mail in one ear, Nell's cry in the other. He was probably busy with homework.

Or not, whispered a niggling voice in my head. I silenced it by looking at Nell, our baby. Our masterpiece. Her pink cheeks, her hair that curled at the ends, those adorable fat legs.

Danny and I were solid. We'd survived the one thing that killed most relationships at our age. Even being teen parents, our love was real. I'd known that since the first night we kissed.

Users Review

From reader reviews:

Travis Wysocki:

The experience that you get from Arrows is the more deep you searching the information that hide into the words the more you get serious about reading it. It doesn't mean that this book is hard to comprehend but Arrows giving you joy feeling of reading. The copy writer conveys their point in a number of way that can be understood by simply anyone who read it because the author of this reserve is well-known enough. That book also makes your own vocabulary increase well. Therefore it is easy to understand then can go to you, both in printed or e-book style are available. We highly recommend you for having this particular Arrows instantly.

Jill White:

A lot of people always spent their particular free time to vacation or maybe go to the outside with them household or their friend. Were you aware? Many a lot of people spent many people free time just watching TV, or playing video games all day long. If you need to try to find a new activity that is look different you can read the book. It is really fun for you personally. If you enjoy the book you read you can spent the whole day to reading a book. The book Arrows it is extremely good to read. There are a lot of people who recommended this book. These people were enjoying reading this book. In the event you did not have enough space bringing this book you can buy often the e-book. You can m0ore easily to read this book through your smart phone. The price is not to cover but this book provides high quality.

Thomas Jones:

Are you kind of active person, only have 10 or perhaps 15 minute in your day to upgrading your mind expertise or thinking skill even analytical thinking? Then you are having problem with the book as compared to can satisfy your short space of time to read it because pretty much everything time you only find e-book that need more time to be read. Arrows can be your answer because it can be read by a person who have those short extra time problems.

Eddie McCoy:

In this particular era which is the greater man or woman or who has ability in doing something more are more special than other. Do you want to become among it? It is just simple approach to have that. What you are related is just spending your time little but quite enough to have a look at some books. One of the books in the top list in your reading list is Arrows. This book that is certainly qualified as The Hungry Hillsides can get you closer in growing to be precious person. By looking upward and review this reserve you can get many advantages.

Download and Read Online Arrows By Melissa Gorzelanczyk
#RPJOS20QY7E

Read Arrows By Melissa Gorzelanczyk for online ebook

Arrows By Melissa Gorzelanczyk Free PDF d0wnl0ad, audio books, books to read, good books to read, cheap books, good books, online books, books online, book reviews epub, read books online, books to read online, online library, greatbooks to read, PDF best books to read, top books to read Arrows By Melissa Gorzelanczyk books to read online.

Online Arrows By Melissa Gorzelanczyk ebook PDF download

Arrows By Melissa Gorzelanczyk Doc

Arrows By Melissa Gorzelanczyk MobiPocket

Arrows By Melissa Gorzelanczyk EPub

RPJOS20QY7E: Arrows By Melissa Gorzelanczyk